FIRE ISLAND LIGHTSHIP SUNK

Crew Rescued After Collision With American-Hawaiian Liner Philadelphia.

(Special to The Herald)
New York, May 8.—The steamship Philadelphia of the American-Hawaiian line was in collision today with the Fire Island lightship. The latter was so badly damaged she was said to be sinking and her crew was rescued. The lightship was anchored off the eastern coast of Long Island, and was in danger of being lost.

TOOK TO THE WOODS.

Police Break Up Sunday Baseball Game at Freeman's Point.

Villa's army had nothing on the beach of Sunday baseball fans and players that retreated to the woods at Freeman's Point on Sunday afternoon. Somebody sent in a wireless call from Villa's street, and the city hall flit with officers Anderson and Smart went over and butted in on a tight game.

The game was in its early stages and was between the North End Tigers and the Green Street Reserves. Several strong hitters for both sides were there. With the "hi-lis," the man on watch at the blockhouse put the field glass on the coast and the retreat toward Dover Point was on.

In the graft for clothing, everybody took a hand in the mix up and it may be several hours before the wearing apparel falls into the hands of the rightful owners.

Anyhow, the cops got a fitful load and took them to the camp. The others rested in the tall pines until the sun disappeared in the western horizon and people into town in the shades of night.

TO LEFT—Large furnished room with gas and hot water heat. Suitable for two people; meals furnished if desired. Address "G," Herald Office, he ms, tw.

JOINT MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD

Storer Post and Corps Honor Memory of Their Departed Members With Impressive Exercises—Wreath Presented By Public Schools of the City

The annual joint memorial services of Storer Post No. 1, G. A. R., and Storer Hotel Corps, No. 6, were held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Odd Fellows' hall and were well attended.

The ladies of the Corps held their services first with President Marion B. Greene presiding. Four vacant chairs draped in black and white occupied the center of the hall in memory of the members who have died during the year. They were Mrs. Lizzie Jenkins, Mrs. Belle Fernald, Mrs. Margaret Humphreys and Mrs. Harriet Macdonald. On the right were two beautiful bouquets of cut flowers presented by members of the Corps in memory of Lorenzo T. Burroughs, an honorary member and a great favorite in the Corps. After the services these flowers were taken to the cemetery and placed on his grave.

Mrs. Martha Rhodes, historian of the Corps, made an able address, in which she gave the record of the departed members and paid them fitting tribute. This was delivered in an excellent manner and Mrs. Rhodes was complimented upon it.

The exercises of Storer Post were held next and were opened by Commander M. H. Bell. Four vacant chairs were draped in black and white in memory of the departed comrades, Lorenzo T. Burroughs, Jeremiah L. Godfrey, Albert A. Sheafe and Owen

W. Bartlett, who have died since the memorial services a year ago.

Major David Urich next introduced Miss Helen Kelley of the Whipple school who presented a beautiful wreath, the annual gift from the public schools of this city to Storer Post. Major Urich spoke as follows:

Commander: I have not only the great honor, Sir, but no less proud pleasure of presenting to you for audience this young miss, our pupil in our public schools. She comes to you here, Sir, on this solemn occasion, as the hostess representative of the largest grammar school in our city, whose membership is numbered by upward of 500 of the coming generation of our inhabitants.

She comes here on this sad occasion, Sir, with a duty and a mission, from them to you, to perform and in the furtherance of that duty and mission from the present new generation to you and to us of the old, and especially to the memory of our comrades who are now of the past.

I have the honor of introducing to you, Sir, Miss Helen Kelley of our historically named old Whipple school, whose purpose and mission therefrom she comes patriotically prepared to explain.

Miss Kelley in presenting the wreath gave the following neatly de-

WILL CONTINUE CONFERENCES

Generals Scott and Obregon to Conclude the Protocol Between U. S. and Mexico.

(Special to The Herald)
Washington, May 8.—General Scott today notified the war department that he and General Obregon would continue their conference today. He stated he had been ready on Sunday to conclude the protocol with Gen. Obregon, but that he had deferred action pending the receipt of particulars of the Glen Springs raid. Gen. Scott made it plain that he was not interfering in any way with Gen. Funston's plans. His orders are to protect the border. All the troops now on the border are under Gen. Funston's immediate control and he can do with them as he sees fit. It was stated at the war department today that no steps had yet been taken to send reinforcements to the border as no request has yet been received from Funston for additional troops.

THIS YARD DID GOOD WORK

Service Was Excellent During the Communication Test.

During the preparedness communication test made by the navy department between Washington, D. C. and all the navy yards of the country on Saturday and Sunday by telegraph and telephone, the service rendered by the operators at Portsmouth navy yard in all stages of the period of communication was excellent. According to reports Portsmouth yard lead several of the others. The three men on duty at the local yard were P. F. Goodrum of Boston, who handled the telephone end of it; G. C. Clapp, Boston, and W. E. Matthews of Springfield, Mass., on the telegraph lines. Portsmouth yard worked every naval station of the country and old telephone and telegraph business with Puget Sound and Mare Island as easy as if working Boston.

Capt. W. L. Howard, commandant of the yard, states that it was nothing short of excellent and that he could distinguish the voice of the secretary of the navy in Washington as well as if they were only a few miles apart.

The navy department office at Washington acted as a central exchange for the connecting lines north and south, east and west, and it was so arranged that every station of the government was at one time directly connected with each other. Not a hitch of any kind was discovered throughout the entire period of test.

Mr. Clapp, one of the experts on the telegraph lines, was a former resident of this city where he acted as manager of the telegraph office on Congress street.

WILL START A REPLY AT ONCE

President Wilson Not Entirely Satisfied With Germany's Answer to U. S. Ultimatum

(Special to The Herald)

Washington, May 8.—White House officials stated today that the President's reply to the latest German note probably will be started to Berlin immediately. It is the intention to make the note public at once. It is stated that the reply will accept the German orders to submarine commanders as meeting the demands contained in his ultimatum of April 18. It also will reserve the right to deal with developments as they take place and the right to deal with the contents of the U. S. reserves itself to the right to take such action as it sees fit regarding the British blockade of Germany which the German note protested as illegal and demanded that this government act to have it modified so that the freedom of the seas shall be observed by the Entente allies. White House officials admitted that the note was complete and had been sent to the state department. Secretary Lansing, brusquely refused to discuss it in any way saying that "at present," he had nothing to say. Inasmuch as the original note had been dispatched sixteen hours before any admission was made that it had been sent, the general impression in official circles that it was well on its way to Berlin and that the announcement that it had been started was deferred until word was received that it had reached there. Officials generally accepted today the view that the submarine crisis has passed for the present. If the new orders are obeyed literally officials say, then there can be no recurrence of it. If these orders are violated those who know the President's mind, declare that a diplomatic crisis will come with surprising suddenness.

WILL GATHER IN UTAH

Ninth Annual Governors' Conference to Be Held at Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake City, May 7.—Heads of most of the states will gather here on June 27 in the ninth annual Governors' Conference. The general subject of discussion will be the great commercial rivalry which is expected to follow the close of the European war and American preparation to meet this intensified foreign competition.

"The present world war," said Miles C. Riley, secretary of the Governors' Conference, "has forced upon Europe greater efficiency in production and distribution, a quicker moving, less wasteful commercial system, which has been so thoroughly organized as to include all business from the first steps in agriculture to the last steps in manufacture and transportation. The new methods have come to stay. This movement will become

PORTSMOUTH HIGH 13 AMESBURY HIGH 6

Home Team Took Easy Game on Saturday Afternoon from Massachusetts Boys--Butler Gets Two Home Runs. Several Subs Used During Game

Due probably to the unusual spring-like weather as much as to any other cause the game on Saturday between Portsmouth and Amesbury high schools was not as good baseball as had been expected, but Portsmouth high defeated their opponents 13 to 6, out-batting them and out-fielding them. It is pretty early to put a ball team and it is believed that the big high school team are going to put up a far better brand of game when they stand up against Deering high on Tuesday.

Hodgdon opened the game for Portsmouth and was far from being as effective as usual, lacking the control that was expected. He pitched good ball at that, getting a good number of strike-outs. Butler featured at the bat, hitting out two for the round trip out of three times at bat. He left the game in the sixth inning when Akerman was sent in to bat for Hodgdon. Clark replaced Hodgdon on the mound and was followed two innings later by Spiney. One pretty little bingle was hammered out in the eighth by Fraser, battling for Davis, when he dropped a nice little Texas leaguer back of the second baseman, sending in two runs.

The Game

1st Inning.—Larnard, the first man up, picked out a good one and smashed it out to Craig in left field. Craig dropped the ball and Larnard landed on second. He took third on a wild pitch. Armstrong was passed, stealing second. Scott fanned. Morrill singled to right, scoring Larnard. Yeaton fled out to Timmons at short. One run.

Mulholland walked. Thompson fanned. Mulholland stole second and took third on an error by the catcher who threw high to stop the steal. Butler leaned on the second ball pitched to him, driving it to deep right for a home, scoring Mulholland ahead of him. Bailey and Timmons each to their bases on being hit by pitched balls. Craig attempted to sacrifice and was safe on Scott's error at first. Bailey and Timmons tallying. Davis fanned. Smith fled to Morrill at center, four runs.

2d Inning.—Beaton singled and stole second. Moughan singled to center and Beaton was out at third. Mulholland to Butler. Currier hit to Butler and was safe. Butler throwing Moughan out at second to Thompson who came close to doubling to Bailey at first. Pensey walked. Larnard fanned. No runs.

Hodgdon fled out to Morrill at center. Mulholland was passed. Thompson fled out to Beaton in left. Butler was out on a fly to Morrill in center. No runs.

3d Inning.—Armstrong fanned. Scott hit to right for three bases. Morrill was out at first. Hodgdon to Bailey. Yeaton was thrown out. Thompson to Bailey. No runs.

4th Inning.—Beaton fanned. Moughan singled to right. Currier fanned. Pensey out at first. Hodgdon to Bailey. No runs.

5th Inning.—Larnard was thrown out at first. Butler to Bailey. Armstrong drove a hot liner through Butler and Craig missed the ball, allowing it to pass his and Armstrong scored. Scott and Morrill fanned. One run.

6th Inning.—Beaton was out on a foul fly to Smith. Beaton was passed. Hodgdon singled to center, going second on the throw to the plate to out off Smith. Smith was safe when Larnard dropped the ball. Mulholland was out on a fly to Armstrong in right. Thompson fled out to Morrill in center. Six runs.

7th Inning.—Beaton was out on a foul fly to Smith. Beaton was passed. Hodgdon singled to center, going second on the throw to the plate to out off Smith. Smith was safe when Larnard dropped the ball. Mulholland was out on a fly to Armstrong in right. Thompson fled out to Morrill in center. Six runs.

8th Inning.—Beaton was out on a foul fly to Smith. Beaton was passed. Hodgdon singled to center, going second on the throw to the plate to out off Smith. Smith was safe when Larnard dropped the ball. Mulholland was out on a fly to Armstrong in right. Thompson fled out to Morrill in center. Six runs.

9th Inning.—Beaton was out on a foul fly to Smith. Beaton was passed. Hodgdon singled to center, going second on the throw to the plate to out off Smith. Smith was safe when Larnard dropped the ball. Mulholland was out on a fly to Armstrong in right. Thompson fled out to Morrill in center. Six runs.

AMERICAN LOST A LEG, BUT WON A COUNTESS.

LIEUTENANT AND MRS. THEODORE MARBURG

Theodore Marburg, Jr., of Ball's Mills, Pa., a former U. S. Minister to Belgium, has just arrived in the U. S. with one of the two legs he had before he left. He lost his right leg while in the aviation corps of the British army. He fell from a height of 200 feet. He was nursed by the Belgian countess Gesselle de Vivario. Of course he fell in love with her (just look upon her in the picture). So he made her Mrs. Marburg and brought her back.

Spiney, by Pensey 2. Struck out by Hodgdon 7. By Clark 3, by Spiney 5. Pensey 4. Hit by pitched ball, Bailey. Akerman, Moughan, Hanley.

(a) Batted for Beaton in the ninth. (b) Batted for Currier in the ninth. *Larnard hit in 2d on strikes with men on 1st and 2d.

WRESTLING

Boston, May 7.—Wrestling fans appear to be due for the biggest kind of a treat Monday night when Promoter George Tuohy holds another of his carnivals in Mechanics Building, with four Dutch matches between some of the world's best matmen as the offering.

Three of the men will be new to wrestling enthusiasts in this section of the country, the principal of these being Joe Rogers, the "American Apollo," who is looked upon as one of the finest athletes ever developed in this country. Rogers is a giant in the fullest sense of the word, with a weight of 280 pounds and standing 6 feet 8 inches in height. He has wrestled in all parts of the world, but the difficulty of getting opponents is due to his great size. Frank Leavitt, his opponent is the American army champion, stands 6 feet 4 inches in height and tops the 250 pound mark.

Another new comer is Jim Losson, the English giant, who stands 6 feet 6 inches and weighs 287 pounds. He is paired with Waldek Zbyzsko, the clever Polish champion. Harry LeMar, the western sensational wrestler, is also making his first appearance here and is paired with Cyclone Burns, while Karl Lemle, the popular Bohemian, will throttle Hevumpaa, the "Flery Finn."

All four matches will be to a finish, best two out of three falls under catch-as-catch-can rules.

With popular prices Promoter Tuohy is looking for one of the biggest crowds of the season.

NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE 64, BATES 52, AT LEWISTON

Lewiston, Me., May 6.—New Hampshire State defeated Bates in the track meet at Garcelin Field this afternoon by 64 points to 52.

Gregory, a Bates freshman from Franklin, Mass., lowered the Bates two mile record to 10m 5 1-5s. The summary:

100-yard dash—Won by Barrow. Bates; Ross, New Hampshire, second; Dudley, New Hampshire, third. Time, 16 3-5s.

High Hurdles—Won by Quimby. Bates; Hovey, New Hampshire, second; Coleman, Bates, third. Time, 11 4-5s.

PIONEER WOMAN SUFFRAGIST DEAD

Mrs. Armenia S. White of Concord Was Very Prominent in Past Years.

Concord, May 8.—Mrs. Armenia S. White, a pioneer advocate of woman suffrage in this country, who was also prominently identified with the temperance movement, died at the home of her son here on Sunday at the age of 99 years. Mrs. White was born in Mendon, Mass., and traced her ancestry back to the Mayflower pilgrims. She was a close friend of the late Frances E. Willard, former president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. White was extremely active in the cause of temperance and woman's suffrage being the first state president of the W. C. T. U. and of the New Hampshire Woman's Suffrage Association. She was an associate and co-worker of Lucy Stone, Julia Ward Howe and Mary A. Livermore in the anti-slavery cause; with Frances E. Willard in the temperance movement; and with Marilla M. Rickard in suffrage. Of this distinguished array of American women Mrs. Rickard is the only one alive today.

PETITION GRANTED.

Commission Allows New Bank to Start at Suncook.

The bank commission on Saturday granted a petition for the establishment of the Suncook bank of Portsmouth which was incorporated recently at the office of the secretary of state. George W. Fowler, former purchasing agent, appeared for the petitioners. Mr. Fowler is one of the promoters of the bank and will be actively identified with it.

The incorporators will now proceed to form an organization which when completed will be submitted to the board of incorporation, which is composed of the attorney general and the bank commissioners and if approved the capital stock will be paid in and the bank ready to do business. There was no opposition.

VERDUN IS CHIEF BASIS FOR EARLY PEACE PLEA

London, Sunday.—While officials and diplomats in all capitals of the world are discussing the peace overtures in the Berlin reply to the American submarine note Germany is making a desperate effort to turn her defeat at the battle of Verdun into a semblance of victory by the capture of Hill No. 304, the height which dominates the entire battle front west of the Meuse river.

The fury of this battle and the furious attempts that were made by the Kaiser's forces to break through the French lines were realized only today, when the Paris War Office statement showed that for a whole week the struggle has continued on the west of the Meuse River, particularly on the slopes of Hill No. 304, and around Dead Man Hill, with an intensity, equal to that which marked the first few days of the Verdun struggle weeks ago.

Sought Great Tactical Advantage

Apparently the Kaiser hoped that with his troops in the ascendancy at Verdun, victorious after all the fighting of week after week, Germany would be in a strong position to press to the best advantage her peace overtures and, if successful, have a great victory as a basis for the negotiations.

That the Kaiser's commanders before Verdun realized the importance of gaining a victory at this time is evident by the desperate nature of the assaults against Hill No. 304. Clouds of poison gas were used, being sent against the French positions in successive waves. A terrific bombardment of the French barriers with enormous quantities of high explosive shells continued for days in an effort to blast a path for the German infantry up the slopes of the height.

Terrific Losses to New Troops

Fresh regiments hastily brought to the Verdun front were sent forward at favorable times to storm the French trench lines and savage bayonet fights ensued on the slopes of the hill with the French ever successful in holding their ground and driving back the assailants with fearful losses.

Only on Thursday did the Germans succeed in making any gains. On the northern slopes of the height, after a fierce bombardment had destroyed the trenches, the Crown Prince's Infantry occupied a small stretch of ground that the French had to evacuate but were unable to make further gains.

At present the bombardment of the French positions is continuing with vigor but there have been no new infantry assaults. After days of fighting the Germans have made practically no headway in their efforts to capture the approaches to Hill No. 304, and the same is true of several battles that have been fought during the last few days as a result of the German efforts to win ground at Dead Man Hill.

The French War Office report dealing with the Verdun battle today says that the fighting has been incessant around Hill No. 304, the bombardment by the massed German batteries at times being of an unprecedented fury.

The bombardment continues, the Germans apparently not having given up hope of success ever after a week of defeats.

In order to carry out their scheme of attack west of the Meuse the Germans brought operations on other parts of the battle field almost to a standstill.

According to the Paris statement on the east bank of the Meuse there has been nothing but artillery firing for days.

MINUTES IN MANHATTAN

New York, May 6.—Unless the police have made it unpopular since the last time I was there, New York possesses one of the most remarkable beggars' clubs in the world.

Its members gather every evening in a rather quiet chop-suey restaurant in mid-town almost under the Third Avenue elevated.

A stranger might enter, eat his yakimato or chicken omelet, and depart without noticing anything unusual.

But if one lingers and engages in conversation it is not difficult to get acquainted with the gilded panhandlers. Half are some of the more remarkable members.

The president of the club, Ho is dressed immaculately and in good taste. He might be taken for a Wall Street man.

He changes his game often, but there is a favorite: Approaching a stranger with a confident smile, he politely requests a few minutes' conversation. He is a civil engineer and has come to the city with a liberal check in his pocket to take charge of a big job.

Well, like many others he has been foolish. He has dined and wined not wisely but too well. In fact, his last cent is gone. Could you help him to get in touch with his friends and lend him enough to keep him for a few hours? Glad to take your address and hopes some one will do the same for you some day. Thank you again, good day.

Working thin and similar schemes, this beggar prince has made his way from coast to coast many times, always living on the fat of the land.

A typical westerner, Ho is tall, well built, about 35 years old, and wears a flannel shirt and a large broad-brimmed hat.

Ho takes his stand near a railroad station and tells his victim of his ill luck prospecting for work. He can't find a friend in New York and is stranded and without means. If only he had stayed in Montana, or perhaps New Mexico.

A man in a U. S. army uniform. He also is tall, well built and strong looking. He is clean shaven and his uniform fits him like a glove.

This "spite," as the beggars' lingo dub it, tells of twelve years in the army and an honorable discharge. Here he is a man who has served his country well and, if he had been injured, would receive a pension. But nobody wants a man without a trade and indeed, discharged soldiers are looked upon with suspicion, anyway.

In those days of preparedness, his game works well.

A soft-voiced, well-dressed woman of middle age. She frequents hotels and tea rooms, always behaving well and is never arrested, because the detectives can't get "anything on her."

A deformed cripple. At least he appears so when he drags his misshapen body through the door. But a moment later he has become an upright, sprightly man, who briskly steps to a table and orders a good meal.

It is his remarkable double joints which do the trick. He takes his stand on the landings of elevated railroad stations or like places and holds out his cap, with a few cheap postals clutched beside it. He is really out of date though and few members of the club would descend to his crude methods.

The beggar brothers have the city carefully mapped in their minds as to its revenue and producing possibilities.

For instance, Broadway from Fourteenth to Twenty-third street is worth 20 cents to 40 cents an hour; from Twenty-third to Forty-second street from 60 cents to 75 cents; and from Forty-second to Fifty-ninth street, 50 cents to 75 cents.

A persistent beggar arrested and searched here this week was found to have $450 in his pockets and a valuable car, a Brooklyn professional left $13,000 in the bank when he died.

WITH THE SPORTS

The floundering Giants probably never fully absorbed Bill Shakespear's advice on opportunity, which runs thusly:

There is a tide in the affairs of men, Which taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.

Omitted, all the voyages of their life is bound in shallows and miseries! And we must take the current when it serves, Or lose our ventures.

Oh yes, the Braves rusticated in the 1911 cellar until July and then swept onward to a World's championship, but infatuations don't happen every year.

In vaudeville: "Who will box Jack Johnson next?" "I don't know, who?" "The undertaker."

Those who wish to preserve the boxing game in Gotham, should fumigate immediately. The last three heavyweight bouts staged there have left an odor that is extensive to an extreme.

Andre Anderson, highly touted, met Charlie Wolcott in the second round or so Wolcott hit Anderson and went through the ropes and never has come back.

Then Jack Keating was pitted to box Wolcott. He hardly landed a blow. The crowd booed and hooted—and then began to leave the building. In the third round the referee stopped the fight, because of Keating's fearful showing.

And then came the Fred Fulton. Al Reich bout. Those who saw the so-called fight claim that Reich quit cold along in the seventh or eighth round. In the ninth a storm of jeers from the crowd influenced the referee to stop further "hostilities."

Heavyweight bouts just now are as popular in New York as Irish rebels in the House of Lords.

Horsemen who have operated on the Baltimore tracks are demanding bigger purses. They claim that the price of all things incident to owning thoroughbreds has increased and that the track profits are big enough to warrant increasing stakes.

It is pointed out by the horse owners that the attendance averages 5000 daily and that the take of the mutual machines is around $175,000 each day, five per cent of which is deducted by the track officials.

"The track owners can increase all purses at least 25 per cent and still clear big profits," asserted a horse owner. "It costs us nearly 25 per cent more to keep our horses, owing to the increased feed prices. It is only fair that the track men give us a square deal by boosting the size of the prizes."

If the United States Golf Association strictly enforces its amateur-professional rules, it means the disqualification of at least 4,000 linksters who formerly figured as amateurs.

There are that many golfers laboring in sporting goods shops or engaged in the golfing business. And this puts them in the same class as Francis Ouimet who has been showed up by the amateur ranks.

A TRIP TO THE BRITISH FRONT

BY VIGGO TOEPFER,

Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

British Headquarters in France, May 6.—In a little village some miles behind the fighting line, I came upon a batch of prisoners captured by the British two days before. I asked to be allowed to speak to them.

I found them deeply grateful to their captors, who they said, had treated them with the most touching kindness. They were greatly relieved because they would not have to go back to fight for a cause they never looked upon as their own. They were from Danish speaking Germany.

Not one of them was under 20 or over 30, and they were tall, broad shouldered, blue eyed and fair haired and quite willing to talk when I addressed them in their own language.

One of them a man with a frank and intelligent face acting as spokesman said:

"We all feel that the end is approaching. Not so much because Germany is short of men—there are still plenty of reserves, I believe—but because the sufferings of the people at home are becoming unbearable and they do not understand what we are fighting for.

"It is gradually beginning to dawn upon them that all of our victories are to count for nothing and that we must not only give up what we have won, but even more, in order to get the peace the whole German people is sighing for."

"Do you think the German people are in a mood to give up any territory in order to get peace?" I then asked.

"I am quite sure that the people would willingly give up not only every inch of foreign territory now occupied but Alsace Lorraine as well."

"But what about an indemnity?" "I do not possibly see how Germany could pay an indemnity now. We are practically ruined and the intelligent part of the population all know it."

Every letter I get from home speaks of the misery our people are enduring. Our horses and cattle have been taken away, we are short of seed, corn and food, even potatoes are very scarce. That part of Germany is a country of mourning and despair.

"All of our able bodied men have been taken and from the beginning of the war we have always been sent to the most dangerous places. Our casualties prove this.

"No part of Germany, I believe, has suffered as heavily as the part from which I come. More than twelve thousand of our young men, I am told, have fallen. Nothing can describe the misery at home but at least the Germans cannot say of us that we have not done our duty."

"How have you been treated while in the army?" I asked. "Is it true that your officers threaten to shoot you down if you refuse to go forward?"

"No, I cannot complain of the way we have been treated. German officers have their own way of treating their men. They hardly look upon us as human beings, but I think they have been less brutal during the war than in times of peace.

"They demand obedience and the man who hesitates to obey orders knows that he is liable to be shot down. Nothing of the kind, however, has ever occurred in our regiment. We have fought well, I think. We have been fed well too, far better than our police at home, and as you see our clothing is not bad. Our boots are excellent. No, we really must not complain."

"Do you believe this war was forced upon Germany?"

"No intelligent person in Germany really believes that," he said with a smile. "We knew that the war was coming sooner or later. We have been prepared for it for years and we thought we were sure of victory. Our enemies were always quarreling among themselves at home. Germany alone, seemed to be strong."

"But I suppose everything that has happened is for the best. We are all glad we are going to England where we know we shall be treated well. The Tommies are the most kind-hearted men I ever met. They have been wonderfully good to us."

"The other prisoners standing by confirmed the words of their spokesman and all shook my hand as I distributed the cigarettes I had in my pocket among them and bade them goodby.

perous persons or others who get in his way.

In the course of a rehearsal of the new features recently at the Hippodrome, a young lady of the chorus who had no special business in the center of the stage, was standing in front of one of the prima donnas. Mr. Burnside walked up to the chorus girl, and, pointing to the actress, said, "Don't you think that lady is inconsiderate to stand there directly behind you?" "Oh no," replied the one addressed, but slowly it dawned on her that it was she who was in the way, and she moved aside.

"They call him 'Turney' at the Hippodrome, and he always signs himself 'R. H. Burnside.' What the initials stand for, nobody but himself knows, and he won't tell. He is a quiet, simple mannered man, who has been connected with the stage since he was ten years old, and who has produced so many musical and other shows in the last fifteen years, in New York and London, that he can't remember them all offhand. 'Hill Hip Hoory' is the fourth production he has staged for Mr. Dillingham in two seasons; the other three being 'Chin Chin,' 'Watch Your Step' and 'Step, Look and Listen.'

NEW METHOD INAUGURATED AT DARTMOUTH.

In promoting more cordial relations between secondary schools and the College, Dartmouth has inaugurated a method of selecting the schools which may admit pupils on certificate. In order to increase the efficiency of this scheme the President of the College has invited to an informal conference August 8-12 the secondary school principals and superintendents of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts. By bringing these men to gether in the northern New England states which are on Dartmouth's approved list it is felt that the visitors to the college will form a more definite idea of the type of college which Dartmouth aspires to be, and the sort of boy who may wisely come here for his college course.

The discussions will give the faculty of the College, which wishes to discover the most effective means of cooperation, a fuller presentation of the problems of the secondary schools and the desirable relations between these schools and Dartmouth. The Education courses of the Summer Session and the public addresses may give our guests some new suggestions for increases in efficiency in public education.

No annual gathering is proposed. Dartmouth does not wish this conference to compete with the state conferences for Principals and Superintendents, and, accordingly, urges that if attendance at only one is possible this summer, preference be given to the state conference.

Several men of high reputation in secondary school work, invited in for the purpose or connected with the Summer Session of the College, will address this conference, as well as conduct round-table discussions on topics pertinent to the purpose of the gathering. Among the speakers will be Mr. Eison, Associate Superintendent of New York City; and Mr. Hazen, Principal of the New Utrecht high school, New York; and Mr. Bliss, Superintendent of Schools, Montclair, N. J., in the final meetings of the conference.

R. Hillegas, Commissioner of Education of Vermont, and Mr. H. A. Brown, Director of the New Hampshire Bureau of Educational Research, will be the speakers.

The College has made arrangements for the entertainment of its guests in college dormitories and will place the whole college plant at the disposal of the conference.

GUARANTEED CHICKS

It's not the number of chicks you hatch that count but the number that live. Careful mating of my breeding pens, the proper selection of eggs, a thorough knowledge of the art of incubation combined with all modern facilities in hatching have made possible the following:

A Good Idea.

There should be general satisfaction among the soldiers of the regular army and the people of the country in the action taken by the United States Senate in adopting an amendment to the army bill providing for vocational training for men in the regular service, under civilian instructors. Under the law 70 hours a month would be devoted to this work, which would result in substantial benefit to all who improved the opportunity presented. It is believed by friends of the measure that it would increase the attractiveness of the service and stimulate enlistments.

The pay of soldiers is not large and the ranks are necessarily filled with young men, most of whom have no trades or professions and are not fitted for business of any kind. After serving for a number of years in the army they return to private life seriously handicapped in the race for success.

In time of peace there is plenty of time for the soldiers to take up vocational training or studies that would fit them for something besides common labor when they return home, and the action of the Senate is altogether commendable. It is believed that similar action will be taken by the House, and if this is done there will soon be brought about in the regular army conditions making service therein a very different thing from what it is now.

In times of peace Germany gives its soldiers thorough training along mechanical and other lines, which accounts to some extent for the wonderful efficiency of the German people. The United States does not want to be like Germany in all respects, but it can well afford to emulate a good example wherever found, and the practice of training young men for military and civil life at the same time constitutes an example that may well be followed unless there are objections that have not yet been brought to light.

The United States is not a military nation and it is to be hoped it never will be, but something in the way of a standing army will always have to be maintained and it would be far better if the young men in the ranks were to spend part of their time in fitting themselves for the duties of peace as well as for the cruel work of war. Congress will make no mistake in providing for such training, which would doubtless be welcomed by a large proportion of the young men who serve terms in the regular army.

The Grand Army posts and their auxiliary organizations are already making plans for the observance of Memorial Day, which will soon be here. The day is one of deep significance when regarded in its true light, and at a time when so much is being said about patriotism the public should co-operate most heartily with the veterans in its observance this year, thereby proving that the work of the nation's defenders is never forgotten by a loyal and appreciative people.

Two Boston hospital orderlies recently permitted a medical man who thought he had discovered the germ of scarlet fever to inoculate them with germs, but the disease did not develop. Either the men were immune or the scientist was mistaken. But both he and the orderlies are entitled to the highest praise for their efforts and willingness to take part in the battle against one of the most virulent diseases to which the human race is subject.

Porto Rico has been shaken by earthquakes within the last few days and the people were given a thorough scare, though the damage was not heavy. The island has a beautiful climate and a fertile soil, but there are drawbacks of one kind or another in all parts of the world, and few more serious than liability to earthquakes.

Enlistments in the army and navy are not coming as fast as desired, and this is unmistakable evidence that business conditions are good. Young men who want jobs can get them without entering the army or navy, a fact which makes it certain that those who are enlisting mean business and have the right sort of stuff in them.

The hopes of automobile owners that a powder has been discovered which, mixed with water, will take the place of gasoline at a trifling part of its cost, are much stronger than their faith. Not much has been heard about the discovery since Henry Ford investigated and "reserved judgment."

Admiral Dewey recommends a building program which would make the American navy the second best in the world within three years. Even this is not so ambitious as the programs of some others, but it is highly ambitious enough.

What has become of those Apache scouts that started out after Villa some time ago? It seems at least as if a "report" were due.

Republics are said to be ungrateful, and without doubt the Irish republic is very ungrateful for what has happened to it.

Invited address:

Commander, officers and comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic: "It is fitting at this time of year to let our thoughts dwell on the great heroism displayed by the boys in blue to make this a free and independent nation in that war of fifty-five years ago.

"Many years have passed since the first blood of the Civil war was shed, of all the tens of thousands that lived during that war, so few of them are now living that we look with reverence upon those who have survived the march of years.

"Never before have we really felt the horrors of war until today, when the country is in such a perilous condition, trying to avoid being drawn into the great European conflict.

"Fighting is by no means the only way the people of this generation can show its respect for our country. We can serve her by being good citizens and standing by the flag under all conditions.

"Now, Commander, as the honor has fallen upon my class this year, I present this wreath in behalf of my school and in memory of your comrades who have departed from this life during the past year. Although they have gone to the Great Beyond, the memory of their noble deeds will always live in our hearts."

Commander A. J. Bell, in behalf of Storer Post, No. 1, accepted the wreath in the following words:

"The sad and proud pleasure of accepting this patriotic tribute from the public schools, has devolved upon me as Commander of Storer Post, No. 1, Dept. of N. H., and in their behalf, I extend to you, their grateful and appreciative thanks. On an occasion like this, it speaks to the hearts of all who admire moral and personal heroism as exemplified by the deeds of these departed comrades, whose memory we are today holding in grateful remembrance—a remnant of those who have preceded us by a day's march along the route of the immortal caravan—the mighty dead—not inappropriately called the deathless dead, for though they have yielded in the order of nature to the conqueror of humanity, are not dead, but sleeping.

"Their lives are continued in their unending acts and unending example. Their history shall ever be kept alive by the brightness of their record; the pages of the book will be kept still illuminated, so that at some future day, yet further down the miles of time, the youth of that generation may be directed to a still unending and continuous panorama without limit or blemish.

"After more than a half century after the close of the Civil war, which shook the continent to the foundation, now, a complete unity of sentiment existing everywhere through this broad land and fortelling the grandeur and enduring greatness through all the ages to come—I thank you most sincerely."

A pleasing vocal solo was rendered by Mr. Chester Miller of Brockton, accompanied by Mrs. L. W. Atwood at the piano.

Miss Victoria May Moody, a member of the Corps, then rendered Fred Hart's "The Second Review of the Grand Army," which was as follows:

I read last night of the Grand Review in Washington's chiefest avenue—Two hundred thousand men in blue I think they said was the number—Till I seemed to hear their tramping feet, The bugle blast and the drum's quick beat, The clatter of hoofs in the stony street, The cheers of the people who came to greet, And the thousand details that to repeat Would only my verse enumber—Till I fell in a reverie, sad and sweet, And then to a fitful slumber.

When, lo! in a vision I seemed to stand In the lonely Capitol. On each a hand far stretched the parties, dim and grand, Its columns ranged, like a martial band Of sheeted spectres, whom some command Had called to a last reviewing, And the streets of the city were white and bare; No footfall echoed across the square; But out of the misty midnight air I heard in the distance a trumpet's flare, And the wandering night-winds seemed to bear The sound of a far attolung.

Then I held my breath with fear and dread; For into the square with a blazen tread, There rode a figure whose stately head O'erlooked the review that morning, That never bowed from its firm-set seat, When the living column passed its feet, Yet now rode steadily up the street To the phantom bugle's warning;

Till it reached the Capitol square and wheeled, And there in the moonlight stood re-

CURRENT OPINION

Citizens of Irish Blood Recognize Value of Liberty Ordered by Law.

There has been an easy amalgamation of the Irish with our American life. They have added much to the composite American made from various European stocks. They have softened the American wit. They have added to American tenderness. They have increased the spirit of good fellowship, added to our social graces, increased our poetical imagination, made us more optimistic and added to our sunny philosophy.

Socialism and anarchy have found no lodgment among Irishmen. They believe in institutions of modern society. They believe in upholding our national and our state governments. They are not full of diatribes against the existing order. They struggle for equality of opportunity and recognize the value of liberty ordered by law.

They are not seeking to invent a new society and turn the present one topsy-turvy.

They are operating in full spirit of the civilization, the good fortune, the prosperity and the happiness that are possible under our American government. They are grateful for them; they value them; they will fight to preserve them.—By William H. Taft, Former President of the United States.

vented A well known form that in state and field

Had led her patriots stirs: Whose face was turned to the sleeping camp. Afar through the river's fog and damp,

That showed no flicker, nor wanted lamp.

Nor wasted bivouac fires.

And I saw a phantom army come, With never a sound of life or drum,

But keeping time to a throbbing hum Of waiting and lamentation.

The martyred heroes of Malvern Hill, Of Gettysburg and Chancellorsville, The men whose wasted figures fill

The patriot grave of this nation.

And then came the nameless dead—the men Who perished in fever, swamp and fen,

The slowly starved of the prison pen; And marching beside the others, Came the dusky martyrs of Pillow's light.

With limbs enfranchised and bearing bright;

I thought—perhaps 'twas the pale moonlight— They looked as white as their brothers;

And so all night marched the nation's dead, With never a banner above them spread,

Nor a badge, nor a motto brandished, No mark save the bare uncovered head

Of the silent bronze Reviewer; With never an arch save the vaulted sky;

With never a flower save those that lie On the distant graves—for love could buy

No gift that was purer or truer.

So all night long swept the strange array;

So all night long till the morning gray I watched for one who had passed away;

With a reverent awe and wonder—Till a blue cap waved in the lengthening line,

And I knew that one who was kin of mine

Had come; and I spoke—and lo! that sign

Awakened me from my slumber.

Following this reading, the Post Adjutant, Henry S. Paul, read the record of the departed comrades, immediately after the reading of which three rolls were beaten upon a muffled drum, and at the conclusion of this ceremony, taps was sounded by a bugler from Fort Constitution.

Following this Mr. Miller sang another solo, after which Joseph S. Doonittle, chaplain of Storer Post, gave a fine and impressive address, at the conclusion of which the veterans gathered around the altar and were led in prayer by Chaplain Doonittle.

Chaplain Doonittle spoke as follows: "Once more we have assembled to honor the memory of those comrades of ours, who have answered to the roll call from on high; men who hastened to the call of country in its hour of direst need, and whose lives were consecrated to a holy cause.

That through their sacrifices future generations might enjoy the great inheritance transmitted to them by the fathers. Patiently and long they fought to attain their heart's desire.

Of many the supreme sacrifice was required, and willingly made. These lives consecrated to a holy cause have enriched our own, and the story of their heroic deeds will illumine the pages of history through all coming times, and so long as mankind cherishes love of country, so long will the memory of these men be kept green; and it in the future should the necessity arise for men to emulate their example, confidently we believe they will not be found wanting, and thus the country will as in the past emerge victorious from all trials that may beset us as a nation. Let us ever be true to our highest ideals of citizenship, with a sincere determination to find the right, and to govern ourselves accordingly. Thus we shall prove worthy of all sacrifices made by these men, whose memory we honor today."

Another solo was given by Mr. Miller, and the speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Luther W. Atwood, pastor of the Universalist church, was introduced by Commander Bell. Rev. Mr. Atwood spoke upon the good work and brave deeds of the "boys in blue," in the great war of 1860-5, and gave them much praise. His address was intensely interesting, and held the close attention of his hearers.

At the conclusion of the address, the doxology was sung by all, after which the closing exercises were held.

Charles Oliver and Frank Walker, members of the Sons of Veterans, assisted as ushers at the services.

THE SOUTHERNMOST CITY IN THE WORLD

If asked to name the city closest to the South Pole doubtless many people in the United States—and elsewhere for that matter—would need to consult a school geography or an atlas before answering. And yet, it is one of the greatest wool exporting ports in the world, located on the Strait of Magellan, and is comparatively well known by the name of Punta Arenas.

How the Spaniards came to found a settlement in this remote section of the world, how it passed out of existence, how it was revived in the nineteenth century by the Chileans, and how it has thrived, prospered and grown rich since then, is all brought out in an article by Edward Albers in the current number of the Bulletin of the Pan American Union, Washington, D. C.

In tracing the dark and romantic history of the Strait of Magellan from the time of its discovery by the famous Portuguese navigator, Fernando de Magalhães, in 1520, the writer tells of the practical abandonment of the route by the Spaniards, until 1578, when the intrepid Sir Francis Drake sailed through its treacherous channels and pursued his way on up the coast of the Americas even as far as California. It was this feat that really caused the first attempt to found a colony in this bleak and inhospitable region.

"Pera was at peace, when for our sins some English pirates pressed through the Strait of the Mother of God, formerly called the Strait of Magellan, into the South Sea, under command of Francisco Drake, a native of Plymouth, a man of low condition, but a skillful seaman and a valiant pirate"—is the way, according to this article, that the old Spanish chronicler put it, and "Wherefore Spain, in order to protect her rich ports on the Pacific coast of South America from the depredations of this marauding 'Drake' and similar practically inclined gentry, determined to found a settlement which at the same time would serve as a protecting fortress, at some convenient point on the strait. An expedition was fitted out and under the leadership of the Spanish navigator, Pedro Sarmiento, the first colony was established not far from the present site of Punta Arenas. What with hostile Indians, cold, and starvation, the little settlement was soon wiped out of existence, and the shores of the Strait again became uninhabited by civilized man, and thus remained for many years."

In 1812 the Republic of Chile established a penal colony near the same site, which, about 3 years later was completely burned down by the prisoners, who murdered and killed the governor, guards, and many foreigners. This rebellion was quelled a few months later, and the town rebuilt on its present site and given the name of Punta Arenas (Spanish for "Sandy Point"). It would seem that sheep, raising in the foundation upon which the little city's growth and prosperity depends to a great extent, and in this connection the writer states:

"The gold climate of Tierra del Fuego and the strait region generally is peculiarly adapted to sheep raising. In order to protect them from the rigors of the low temperatures nature provides the sheep with unusually thick and heavy coats of wool, the quality of which is such that it commands good prices in the markets of Europe. Its special qualities are that it washes very white and will take the most delicate dyes exceptionally well.

Thus Punta Arenas has become one of the great wool-exporting ports in the world, something over 20,000,000 pounds being shipped from there annually. It is estimated that there are now 2,000,000 sheep in the territory where 35 years ago there were but 155 head all told. At the time of the writer's visit there was one company, capitalized at $7,500,000, which owned over 1,800,000 acres of land on which were maintained 1,250,000 sheep, 25,000 head of cattle, and 9,152 horses. For one year the production of this company amounted to nearly 2,500,000 pounds of wool, shorn from 1,100,000 sheep, thus averaging 7.21 pounds of wool per animal.

The little city boasts of about 15,000 inhabitants, and their prosperity is indicated when an examination of the credit information books of the banks reveals the fact that among there are 79 fortunes that exceed $100,000; 64 fortunes of more than $200,000; 31 of more than $100,000; and there are several that range from $100,000 to $500,000. Incidentally the reports of the bank also show that there are 2,500 accounts in the savings departments that exceed $200, a remarkable showing for a town of 15,000 people—a showing that perhaps few small cities in the United States or Europe can equal. But that's the kind of a town Punta Arenas is—the "Southernmost City in the World."

KING ALFONSO'S BUREAU RELIEVES WAR ANXIETY.

London, May 8.—Describing the great work of relieving some of the suffering and anxiety of the war which is being carried out by King Alfonso of Spain, an Englishwoman writes from Madrid:

"The Royal Palace of Madrid has been the scene of many strange events in the course of its chequered history, and today something is happening there which may not, indeed, arrest the attention of the historian, but which will leave a lasting impression in many a home throughout the length and breadth of Europe.

"One day, a year or so ago, a despairing mother wrote to King Alfonso imploring his help to find her missing soldier son. The King made inquiries through his Ambassador in Berlin, and the missing son was found. The good deed could not be hid, and letters began to arrive from all the belligerent nations and in many languages imploring his Majesty's aid in some sorrowful quest. The King, with his habitual generosity, undertook the work of mercy with a right good will and no small success, and the flood of correspondence greatly increased.

"In the north-east corner of the Palace, under the direction of Don de Torres, the King's private secretary, an office has been organized which, from humble beginnings, is ever assuming larger proportions.

"Spain is charged with the interests of all the Allied nations except England, both in Berlin and Vienna, and with the interests of Austria in Rome.

"No two letters are alike. The petition may refer to some officer or soldier of one of the Allied Armies lost or heard of on any field of battle from Andalus to the Bukovina, from the Baltic to Mesopotamia; to a missing family in the occupied provinces of France or Belgium; to a wounded soldier to be released, or a condemned criminal to be reprieved."

What with hostile Indians, cold, and starvation, the little settlement was soon wiped out of existence, and the shores of the Strait again became uninhabited by civilized man, and thus remained for many years."

In 1812 the Republic of Chile established a penal colony near the same site, which, about 3 years later was completely burned down by the prisoners, who murdered and killed the governor, guards, and many foreigners. This rebellion was quelled a few months later, and the town rebuilt on its present site and given the name of Punta Arenas (Spanish for "Sandy Point"). It would seem that sheep, raising in the foundation upon which the little city's growth and prosperity depends to a great extent, and in this connection the writer states:

"The gold climate of Tierra del Fuego and the strait region generally is peculiarly adapted to sheep raising. In order to protect them from the rigors of the low temperatures nature provides the sheep with unusually thick and heavy coats of wool, the quality of which is such that it commands good prices in the markets of Europe. Its special qualities are that it washes very white and will take the most delicate dyes exceptionally well.

Thus Punta Arenas has become one of the great wool-exporting ports in the world, something over 20,000,000 pounds being shipped from there annually. It is estimated that there are now 2,000,000 sheep in the territory where 35 years ago there were but 155 head all told. At the time of the writer's visit there was one company, capitalized at $7,500,000, which owned over 1,800,000 acres of land on which were maintained 1,250,000 sheep, 25,000 head of cattle, and 9,152 horses. For one year the production of this company amounted to nearly 2,500,000 pounds of wool, shorn from 1,100,000 sheep, thus averaging 7.21 pounds of wool per animal.

The little city boasts of about 15,000 inhabitants, and their prosperity is indicated when an examination of the credit information books of the banks reveals the fact that among there are 79 fortunes that exceed $100,000; 64 fortunes of more than $200,000; 31 of more than $100,000; and there are several that range from $100,000 to $500,000. Incidentally the reports of the bank also show that there are 2,500 accounts in the savings departments that exceed $200, a remarkable showing for a town of 15,000 people—a showing that perhaps few small cities in the United States or Europe can equal. But that's the kind of a town Punta Arenas is—the "Southernmost City in the World."

KING ALFONSO'S BUREAU RELIEVES WAR ANXIETY.

London, May 8.—Describing the great work of relieving some of the suffering and anxiety of the war which is being carried out by King Alfonso of Spain, an Englishwoman writes from Madrid:

"The Royal Palace of Madrid has been the scene of many strange events in the course of its chequered history, and today something is happening there which may not, indeed, arrest the attention of the historian, but which will leave a lasting impression in many a home throughout the length and breadth of Europe.

"One day, a year or so ago, a despairing mother wrote to King Alfonso imploring his help to find her missing soldier son. The King made inquiries through his Ambassador in Berlin, and the missing son was found. The good deed could not be hid, and letters began to arrive from all the belligerent nations and in many languages imploring his Majesty's aid in some sorrowful quest. The King, with his habitual generosity, undertook the work of mercy with a right good will and no small success, and the flood of correspondence greatly increased.

"In the north-east corner of the Palace, under the direction of Don de Torres, the King's private secretary, an office has been organized which, from humble beginnings, is ever assuming larger proportions.

"Spain is charged with the interests of all the Allied nations except England, both in Berlin and Vienna, and with the interests of Austria in Rome.

"No two letters are alike. The petition may refer to some officer or soldier of one of the Allied Armies lost or heard of on any field of battle from Andalus to the Bukovina, from the Baltic to Mesopotamia; to a missing family in the occupied provinces of France or Belgium; to a wounded soldier to be released, or a condemned criminal to be reprieved."

"It may ask for news of a long lost child or petition for a marriage by proxy; it may be signed by the greatest lady in the land or by the humblest cottager; all receive equal attention."

"Each letter is docketed, indexed, and filed according to the subject matter and the country of origin, and acknowledged by return of post. The request is then forwarded with full particulars to Señor Póle de Barnabe, the Spanish Ambassador in Berlin, or to Señor Castro de Canale in Vienna, and through them to the German or Austrian Governments.

"The reply, as soon as received, is conveyed in a tactfully worded letter to the inquirer, often anticipated by a telegram if the news is good and accompanied if bad by an expression of the King's personal condolence; in this case the bad news is conveyed through the priest or the mayor of the parish, so that it may be broken gently and opportunely.

"Some idea of the extent of the work may be gathered from the fact that nearly 200,000 letters have already been dealt with from France alone, while the postal and telegraphic expenses are said to have amounted in two months to about $2,000.

"As English interests in Berlin are in the hands of the American Ambassador, etiquette requires that inquiries relating to British subjects should be made through him alone, but whether owing to a misunderstanding or to the strong attraction exercised by the chivalrous character of the King of Spain upon all those in distress, letters soon begin to arrive from England also.

"When it was suggested that his Majesty might well be excused from accepting this additional burden he replied: 'Not at all, I am Colonel of a British regiment; they are all my comrades in arms. I shall do what I can for them.' And so he does, the inquiry being forwarded in each case through the kind offices of the American Ambassador in Berlin.

"The labor entailed by this delicate and complicated task is both arduous and exacting, but no work in Madrid is more eagerly or conscientiously performed. The care which Señor de Torres has bestowed upon the minutest details of the organization, the great tact with which he has chosen the form of words to be employed in each individual case, preclaim at every stage that this is truly a labor of love; and the King's personal attention and the gentle influence of Queen Victoria are apparent at every stage of the operations."

DANIELS TALKED BY WIRELESS

Head of Navy Dept. in Constant Communication With All Stations.

Washington, May 8.—Standing on the bridge of the battleship New Hampshire in Hampton Roads late on Saturday afternoon, Captain Lloyd H. Chandler, commander of that warship and son of ex-Senator William S. Chandler of New Hampshire, a former secretary of the navy, linked by wireless telephone with army and navy officials assembled around the desk of Josephus Daniels, secretary of the Navy in Washington. The conversation between Captain Chandler and these officials was carried on as easily as if they had been standing in the same room, and continued for nearly half an hour. Compliments were exchanged and orders were officially given by wireless telephone direct from the office of the secretary of the navy to a ship at sea for the first time in the world's history.

At the same time, Secretary Daniels and officers of the navy stationed in the navy department, talked, by long distance telephone with the naval stations at Norfolk, New York, Portsmouth, Boston, Chicago, San Diego, Pensacola and other points, exchanging instantaneous messages and giving official orders by word of mouth, over thousands of miles of territory for the transaction of naval business.

It may ask for news of a long lost child or petition for a marriage by proxy; it may be signed by the greatest lady in the land or by the humblest cottager; all receive equal attention."

Here's Real Paint

House painting isn't a matter of prejudice—it's a matter of business and common sense.

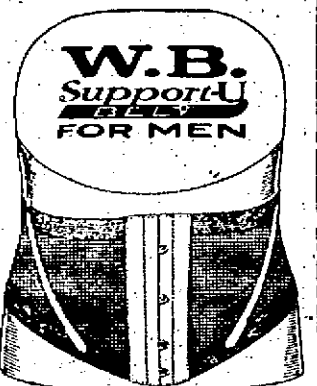

That's why you ought to make sure what kind of paint your painter is going to use on your job—or what kind of paint you buy from the dealer. Paint isn't like an apple—you can't tell by looking at it or by biting it—how good or bad it is.

It takes weeks, perhaps months, and maybe a year or more to tell whether it was worth what you paid.

SWP

stands for Sherwin-Williams Paint (Prepared) and its fifty-year record of results means quality and satisfaction to any painter or property-owner. Be sure the initials are on the label, then you can count on the contents being right.

UNITED STATES EXPECTED TO REJECT GERMAN CONDITIONS

Note Not Now Considered Acceptable and Failure to Take Up Lusitania Case is Considered Insulting

Washington, May 7.—The lack of definite information today as to the attitude which the United States will assume toward Germany was due to the fact that neither the President nor his advisers have reached any conclusion. It is prevailing impression that they will before Tuesday decide to accept the substance, ignore the form and reject the conditions proposed by the Imperial Government in answer to the demand for "an immediate abandonment" of the illegal submarine practices which shocked the world by the sinking of the Lusitania.

Whether that year-old crime shall be punished by a severance of relations between the United States and Germany rests upon the deliberations of the President and his Cabinet within the next 72 hours.

Possible No Reply Will Be Sent
Opinion as to whether the note requires an answer seems divided. Decision rests with the President. So far he has not indicated to any one his final judgment in the matter.

It is entirely possible that no reply will be sent, for the present at least, and that the President will maintain complete silence for a time, allowing Germany to demonstrate on her own behalf the good faith of her intention to carry out the policy indicated in her new orders to submarine commanders.

Although the President realizes that the promises given are the cardinal elements of the note, he is understood to be displeased over the language used and the conditions apparently attached.

Should the note be accepted as satisfactory and a reply sent, it is expected to take the form of a notification to Germany that the United States has decided not to sever diplomatic relations as long as the new submarine orders remain effective and are observed.

Called "Bullying Insolence"
There is no man in Washington tonight who can predict the outcome of the thought which the President is giving the remarkable document sent by Germany, which angers American officials and public thought because of its "bullying insolence."

The President has devoted the entire day to analysis of the German note which was placed before him in official text this morning.

His ministerial advisers set aside all other business to study the extraordinary and confusing terms that make the basic pledge conceded in response to the ultimatum of the United States of questionable permanent value.

The approximate worth of the guarantee to this country, that Germany will respect the rules of international law, is the problem confronting the President and his Cabinet.

Official Sentiment Evenly Divided
As interpreted by the Administration, public sentiment appears to be about evenly divided on the issue, as does official opinion. The good points seen are held to be:

That, leaving aside phraseology, arrangement and construction, the German rejoinder complies with the basic demand of the United States that undereen boats must visit and search suspected merchant ships and insure the safety of passengers and crew before attack—which is practically all that the United States actually demands.

Second, that Germany's admission of its readiness to make peace has practically extended an invitation to the United States to undertake the role of mediator.

The evil points which, in the official view, more than balance those on the other side of the ledger, are:

First, that in return for its acceptance of the demands made by the United States this Government must compel Great Britain to change its methods of warfare.

Second, the complete absence in the German note of any disavowal for the sinking of the Lusitania, Arabia, Persia and more than 75 other American and neutral passenger and freight ships, or any expressions of regret for the loss of American lives, it being the obvious German intention to ignore its previous tentative proposals as a basis for the settlement of those cases.

Justification, Tone of German Reply
As a matter of fact, a close scrutiny of the official text has only increased the disappointment. Nowhere is it made apparent that Germany entertains any sincere regret that American lives have been sacrificed as the result of the lawless depredations of her submarines.

On the contrary, American officials are compelled to the realization that Germany actually views this feature of the American grievances as entirely incidental to her military necessities compelled by the alleged offenses of Great Britain against the German people.

The whole tone of the German reply is officially viewed as asserting justification rather than renunciation. It is admitted the German Government is trying to "save its face" at home by justifying the deeds of its submarines, but the American view is that she might have accomplished the same thing in a more effective way by disavowing and expressing regret for the offenses.

Pope Appeals to Wilson

If the President does not wholly reject the German reply and resort to the immediate recall of Ambassador Gerard—which is not beyond the eventualities of the situation—there is the very highest authority to justify the statement that he will not indicate the willingness of this Government to continue the exchange of diplomatic notes.

It is improbable that the President may give his first notification to the world of his decision in a personal address to Congress.

The demeanor of Count von Bernstorff, returning from New York this morning, suggested extreme optimism that the long controversy is at an end. Archbishop Ruffini, the papal delegate to Washington, called at the White House today. He left with Sec. Taft, for the President, a note from Pope Benedict. The White House explained that it was a strictly confidential communication and therefore it should not be made public without permission from the Vatican.

It is understood, however, that the Pope reminded the President that the United States at this time is virtually the only barrier that exists between civilization and a world war, and therefore he urged this Government to refrain from breaking relations with Germany on the submarine issue. It is understood the Pope indicated that he believed early peace may be consummated if the United States can induce the Allies to consider terms which might be acceptable to Germany. The Pope, it is understood, has been advised that Germany will consider peace terms immediately.

NEWINGTON

The Reapers' meeting was postponed until this week.

The Shakespeare Society met with Mrs. Howard on Thursday afternoon. A white party was held at the town hall on Friday evening. A number from Portsmouth and Greenland were present and the evening was passed pleasantly by all.

Mrs. de Normandie of Wollaston Heights, who has been the guest of Mrs. Jeannette Barnes, has returned home.

Mrs. Bartholme of Greenland was calling on old friends recently.

Mrs. McClellan is passing a few days in Boston and vicinity.

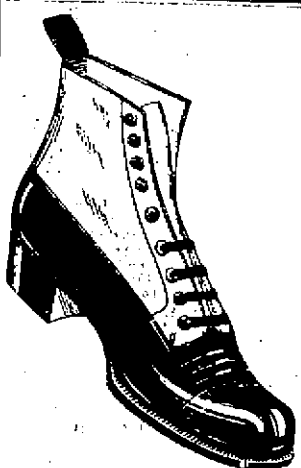

The Historical Society met at the club rooms on Friday afternoon. Much business was transacted and the plans for the Colonial supper which is to be held May 31 were completed.

Dorothy Farber has been absent from school for nearly two weeks on account of sickness.

Mr. Collins is painting the buildings of Mr. Drake of North Hampton.

PAINFULLY INURED BY FALLING GIRDER

JOSEPH DOBSON OF CHAPEL STREET REMOVED TO THE HOSPITAL AFTER ACCIDENT AT THE COLONIAL PAPER PLANT.

Joseph T. Dobson of 40 Chapel street, was taken to the Portsmouth Hospital on Saturday afternoon following an injury received in an accident while at work at the Colonial Paper Plant on Freeman's Point. He was suffering from severe bruises on his back and was still under the care of Dr. Herbert L. Taylor on Sunday night.

Mr. Dobson was working with Fred Hett, loading steel girders on to cars when an accident to a derrick allowed the heavy steel piece to fall, pinning him to the ground. Mr. Taylor was called and had Dobson removed to the hospital at once for treatment. Although the injury is not of a serious nature the patient was suffering considerable pain.

WATER POWERS GOING TO WASTE

Washington, May 6.—Secretary of the Interior Lane, in an article made public today by the Water Power Development Association sums up the unused water power of the country as being capable of producing as much work as could 1,500,000,000 men in a day—thirty times what every adult in America could do.

By Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior

"We are living today in the dawn of an age in which power is the basis for our material progress. The productive abilities of our 100,000,000 people are increased by the use of probably 125,000,000 horse power of mechanical energy, not including the animal power furnished by 300,000,000 horses and mules. Most of the mechanical energy is used in the form of electrical current. When applied to industrial uses one electrical horsepower does the work of ten men with out thing. That is, one electrical horse power, continuously operated, does as much work as thirty men working in eight hour shifts.

Conservation of human labor goes hand in hand with the utilization of mechanical energy and the utilization of that form of energy most cheaply and least wastefully developed accomplishes the maximum in freeing man from muscular toil and increasing his productivity. In the last decade we have harnessed for our utilities and industrial needs something like 6,000,000 horse power of water. This means in terms of human energy, that streams which before that time flowed to waste are now doing work equivalent to the labor of 180,000,000 men working eight hours a day. This development alone represents three times the productive capacity of the unaided hand labor of our adult population.

This accomplishment stands for real progress, but, as compared with our possibilities, it is not as much progress as we should have obtained. Although we are utilizing today 5,000,000 horse power of water, we are annually, daily neglecting and wasting ten times that amount, largely because of our inapplicable laws, since most of the water powers not in use are under government control, and the present laws do not adequately make provision for their fullest development and use. There is in use in the U. S. enough water power to equal if harnessed to the wheels of industry, the daily labor of 1,500,000,000 men, thirty times our present adult population.

"We are depleting our fuel supply in the manufacturing sections of the east and the middle west, while in the far western mountains of undeveloped raw materials adjacent to unused water powers whose development would mean the establishment of great new industries in new manufacturing centers."

"We are robbing our farm lands of fertility and failing to realize the utmost of our agricultural opportunities because of our dependence upon foreign sources of high priced supplies for chemical, plant foods or fertilizers, while mountains or phosphate rock, lime and lignite in the west await only the magic touch of atmospheric nitrogen extracted and fixed with the aid of cheap hydro-electricity to furnish a low priced and plentiful supply of fertilizing elements."

"Millions of acres of land rich in plant foods lie arid and waste in the western country which can be converted into fertile and productive farms, gardens and orchards, merely by pumping onto them the waters of the streams flowing through them. This miracle of making the desert bloom awaits for accomplishment only the laws which will permit capital and enterprise to engage in the harnessing of these streams so that they can pump themselves onto the soil."

"To conserve these vast natural resources is the greatest attainment to which the statesmanship of our day can supply itself."

"To be truly prepared for war is to be fully prepared for peace. This preparation, in its best sense, involves the fullest use and co-ordination of all the natural resources and industrial attainments and activities of the nation. There is no good reason why the United States with its wealth and resources, its leadership in science and invention and its pre-eminence of labor, brains and democratic ideals, should be dependent upon any other nation or country for any of the things necessary to either the fullest enjoyment of peace or the most complete preparedness for undesired conflict.

More than 40 per cent of the potential water power of the United States lies in the comparatively narrow strip bounded by the Cascade Mountains and Sierras in the east, the Pacific ocean in the west, Canada in the north, and Mexico in the south. Some of these water powers now unused are among the cheapest in the world. Long distance, high voltage transmission has almost annihilated distance in making hydro-electricity available in this great western empire.

"Development will open to the west an industrial era of such possibilities as have been almost undreamed of. The fuels available include natural gas, oil, lignite and coal. The coal, reduced to coke, offers raw material for the production by electric a melting processes of the entire extensive used for illuminating purposes. Here at hand are great deposits of limestone that will furnish the lime required to form calcium carbide used in the fixation of nitrogen and the production of ammonia. At hand, also are mountains of phosphate rock awaiting the installation of appliances to free its contents of phosphoric acid and combine it with ammonia as a fertilizing agency at less cost than any now known.

Sodium sulphate, sodium carbonate, and sodium chloride are here, the latter offering material for electro-chemical production of caustic, bleaching powder, etc. In time of peace and for the making in wartime of the deadly chlorine gas, now devastating the trenches of European battlefields.

Iron deposits are here in abundance which with fluxing and reducing materials at hand and cheap hydro-electric power as the agency for reduction, may make the Pacific coast a competitor and the manufacture of electrical furnaces in high grade steel. Also at hand are the materials for the manufacture of such steel alloys as ferromanganese, ferrochrome, ferro-silicon, ferrotungsten, ferromolybdenum and carbide, zinc and copper, gold and silver—all awaiting the magic touch of the cheap electricity potentially in our wasted stream flow.

As a by-product and not an important one, of the atmospheric nitrogen plants, we can produce cyanide, giving new life and impetus to the mining and production of precious metals from low grade ores. In fact, this material either as a by-product, or from metallic sodium produced with the cheap power available, should make the Pacific coast the logical distributing center for cyanide used in gold extraction. Our Alaskan copper, now shipped as far away as New Jersey for smelting, may be cheaply and profitably reduced and manufactured by electrical processes on the Pacific coast, and the same hydro-electric power which will bring these industries into existence will afford for the energy for cheapened transportation of their products over electrified railways."

The "Royal Dozen" of the U. S. S. Montana will have their first Annual Dance on Tuesday night at Freeman's annex. A very enjoyable evening is expected.

NEW COUNCIL INSTITUTED

Interesting Exercises Held at Littleton by Knights of Columbus.

Littleton, May 8.—O'Neill Council, Knights of Columbus, was instituted here Sunday with exercises extending throughout the day and attended by 500 knights from all parts of the state, and by members of the Catholic clergy. Degrees were conferred upon classes numbering in all 130; the work in the first and second degrees being performed in the afternoon and that of the third degree in the evening on a class of 75 by District Deputy J. M. Mead of Orrington, Mass., assisted by District Deputy John A. Hoey of Whitefield. State Deputy E. J. Mahey of Newport was present at the day's exercises.

Three special trains brought the greater number of visiting knights, one from Berlin, one from Lancaster and one from the south, members being present from St. Johnsbury, Vt., Concord, Manchester, Whitefield, Lincoln, Laconia, Claremont and Newport.

The charter for this new council was obtained some time ago, but the ceremonies of instituting the council were delayed until yesterday. The council gets its name from the late Rev. Fr. Daniel A. O'Neill, for many years pastor of the St. Rose of Lima Catholic church here and well known in Manchester, where his death occurred several months ago.

The exercises began at 7:15 o'clock in the morning when the knights gathered at Foresters' hall to attend the 5 o'clock mass. Later at 10:15 solemn high mass was celebrated at St. Rose of Lima church, Rev. J. M. Brevin being the celebrant, assisted by Rev. Fr. Athill of Winoski, Vt., as concelebrant and Rev. Fr. Lee as sub-deacon. The first and second degrees were conferred in the afternoon on classes of 55 candidates. The local officers are: Grand knight, Maurice J. Sullivan; deputy grand knight, Stephen A. Dowd; chancellor, Clement Falvey; recording secretary, Leo Regan; financial secretary, William Pelletier; treasurer, W. J. Boucher; warden, Victor J. Duball; advocate, M. J. Remard; lecturer, George J. Pellerin; inside guard, George J. Barrigan; outside guard, Adolph G. Cyr; trustees, Rudolph Holly, E. A. Blodden and R. A. Gaudin.

At 4 o'clock the knights attended solemn high mass at St. Rose's, where there was an appropriate address by the pastor. Luncheon was served in St. Rose's hall. Among the visiting priests were Revs. Fr. Casey of Lancaster, Fr. Cavanaugh of Groveton, Fr. Belfort of Woodsville, Fr. Gorman of Whitefield and Fr. Kane.

BOSTON LETTER

Boston, May 7.—Appropriation bills calling for an aggregate expenditure by the state of $19,000,000 have been signed by Governor Samuel W. McCall. He has signed 433 bills and 65 resolves, allowed 12 bills to become law without his signature, has vetoed 11 and has had the Senate recall 21 for perfecting amendments. The total number of new laws is 510. One of the last bills signed authorizes the cancellation of uncollectible bills and taxes due the City of Boston. This bill was recalled at the request of the Governor to be amended so that the city collector is still held liable for taxes and special assessments which are a lien on real estate. Other bills signed by the Governor are: An act creating a reserve list of officers in the military and naval branches of the militia. An act appropriating $152,000 for the extermination of contagious diseases among horses, cattle and other animals. A resolve directing the state board of education to make an investigation relative to the need of special training for injured persons "for the purpose of re-establishing or increasing the ability of such persons to earn a livelihood."

Robert W. Kelso, secretary of the State Board of Charity, has made estimates which show that the application of the adage that charity begins at home costs the people of Massachusetts more than $25,000,000 annually. Of this sum $10,000,000 are spent by the public charities while the balance of $15,000,000 reaches the needy and unfortunate persons through private agencies which are incorporated under state laws. Estimates made from the state auditor's books show that the public, through its public agencies, spends approximately $10,000,000 chiefly under the four main heads of maintenance, special improvements, almshouse care, and public outdoor relief. The latter assumes many forms, such as temporary aid and mothers' aid.

How defective school children were made normal, and how ailments of the body were eradicated through dental work, was explained to the several hundred delegates to the Massachusetts Dental Society, which has just brought its 52d annual convention to a close. Mrs. Winifred A. Hart, supervisor of Oral Hygiene of Bridgeport, Ct., told with the aid of lantern slides of the work done in the Connecticut city. She declared that periodical examinations must be made of the children's teeth. She also declared that the big problem confronting those in charge of the health of the school pupils is getting the youngsters to keep their teeth clean. Dr. H. E. Pressel of Pittsburg declared that the response of the public to the direction of the dentist at the present time marks an epoch in co-operation. The statement was made that the public is getting to lose its fear for the dental chair. Education, he declared, is responsible for this.

The Boston Hotel Men's Association through its recently organized Clearing House Association, the first of its kind in the United States, has made the necessary arrangements in a scientific way, to take care of and distribute persons who desire hotel accommodations.

CABLE LETTER

Turin, May 7.—An Italian war correspondent who accompanied the Serbian army on its flight to the Adriatic and recently returned from Corfu says:

"Future generations when they read of the Serbian drama, will refuse to believe this fearful story of suffering and misery. I witnessed the entrance of the Austrians into Belgrade, and the bloody street fights which took place in the Serbian capital, and I saw the retreat to the Morava and the desperation of the Shumadija Division.

"I saw the exodus of a whole nation amid the silence of death, the long trains of wagons driven by women and the endless struggle in the wandering capital at Nish and in the hotel where the Skopjeans met I heard the last proud words of the dying nation. But this suffering was overshadowed by what I saw later.

"More tragic than Belgrade and the Morava, than Mitrovica and Kosovovide—a piece of hell on the enchanted isle of Corfu—lies in Serbia's path of sorrow.

"While Serbia was dying the recruit drill was being held in the Old Serbian provinces to summon the boys of seventeen, sixteen and fifteen years. These boys who might have been strong enough to shoulder a gun in a year or two were called to arms because the government was informed by the Allies that the war would never be given up and might last for years.

"About 30,000 of these youthful recruits were collected, but only a small part of them returned the sea and Corfu. The regular troops on their retreat through the Albanian mountains, had at least guides and leaders and they possessed some food, but the boy recruits were leaderless and had nothing to still their hunger.

"On the Albanian frontier they were met by a Serbian officer who pointed to the west and said:

"March straight ahead. In a month you will reach the sea and there you will find ships to take you to a place of safety."

"The officer returned to his regiment and the recruits marched on to the west through many long weeks. Hundreds of the boys dropped from exhaustion, hunger and cold and the camp sites were always marked by bodies of dozens of young fellows who had laid themselves down to sleep, never to awake again.

"The bark of trees and grass formed their only nourishment. When the column reached the Adriatic only 15,000 of the boys were left and many died on the shore before they could be embarked. Less than 9,000 of the fugitives reached the steamers and all of these were living corpses. Twenty-four hours later the ships cast anchor before Corfu, but a little short sea voyage several hundred more of the boys died.

"The rest of the recruits was landed at Vido, among olive and orange trees in one of the most beautiful spots of God's earth. Many weeks have passed since, but still the boys are dying and in a short time nothing will be left of them. Many might have been saved, but there were no hospitals, no beds and no nurses for them on Corfu. A single physician had to take care of all. Later a few more doctors arrived, but death continued its fearful harvest.

"The fugitives now have beds food and good care, but still they die. Their emaciated bodies are no longer able to assimilate the nourishment given to them and the southern sun does not warm them. Silently, ghastly pale and raked with fever, they lie under their tents awaiting death.

GOVERNMENT WANTS MEN WHO CAN SPEAK FOREIGN LANGUAGES.

(Department of Commerce, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.)

Washington, May 6.—Uncle Sam is still hunting for men qualified to act as clerks to commercial attaches located in foreign countries. He also wants clerks qualified in foreign languages for service in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, at Washington. On May 17 the Civil Service Commission is going to hold a single examination to find eligibles for these positions. Those who pass this test successfully will be placed on the eligible list for both positions. Clerks to commercial attaches are paid $1,500 a year, with expenses for travel and subsistence from Washington to the foreign post and return. Clerks qualified in foreign languages are paid somewhat less, but are in an advantageous position to qualify themselves for vacancies which may arise in the clerk-to-attaché positions, or for other high-grade positions in the field service.

As the examination is to be held in a very short time, candidates are urged to write at once for application blanks which may be had from the Civil Service Commission at Washington or from its district offices. Those desiring to take the examination are urged to file applications for both positions.

Candidates will be examined in the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated:

- | | |
|--|---------|
| Subjects | Weights |
| Copying and spacing (typewriting) | 10 |
| Copying from rough draft (typewriting) | 5 |
| Copying from plain copy (typewriting) | 5 |
| Time (consumed on Subjects 1, 2, 3) | 15 |
| Report writing (an orderly, concise and grammatical statement, not more than 200 words in length, of the essential facts included in a given statement of 400 or 500 words) | 15 |
| Arithmetic (fundamental rules, fractions, weights and measures, percentage, interest, discount, commission, customhouse business, stocks and bonds, partnership, analysis, and statement of simple accounts) | 5 |
| Copying and correcting manuscript (test in making a smooth, corrected copy of a draft of manuscript which includes erasures, misspelled words, errors in syntax, etc.) | 5 |
| General commercial geography | 5 |
| Translation from one or more of the following languages into English: Danish-Norwegian, Dutch, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, Swedish | 35 |
| Total | 100 |
- Candidates who so desire will also be examined in the optional subject of stenography. Persons who pass this test in addition to the required subjects will be given preference in appointment. The candidate may be examined in as many languages as he desires. One hour additional will be allowed for each additional language taken.

Sunday was a pretty fine day and the rain in the evening, although disagreeable, did little damage.

GOD'S SALVATION IS FOR ALL MEN

Marvelous Provisions of God's Grace For the Church and the World.

Scriptural Meaning of the Word Grace. The Grace of God Bringing Salvation First Provided During This Gospel Age—Natural Israel Under Law, Not Under Grace—God's Loving Plan For Man Arranged Ages Ago, but Long Kept Hidden—Church Blessed First, Then the World.

PASTOR RUSSELL

May 7.—Pastor Russell's address for today was from the text, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation for all men hath appeared." (Titus 2:11.) Excerpts follow: The word Grace is used in Scripture to signify unmerited favor. That which is merited would be justice; and it is not justice that we are receiving from God, but favor, mercy. To the nation of Israel God offered his favor through the Law Covenant, but not upon the terms of grace. They were privileged to enter into a relationship with Him that was not given to other nations. God offered them life upon certain conditions, saying to them, "If ye that doest these things (he that keepeth this Law) shall live." (Leviticus 18:5.) Their fruitless endeavor to keep the Law demonstrated what both our Lord and St. Paul point out, the impossibility of keeping the Law. (John 7:19; Romans 3:20.) The reason for their failure is that God's Law is adapted to a perfect man; and mankind are fallen, imperfect.

Man's Great Lesson.

For 4,123 years after Adam's fall into sin there was no grace shown to humanity. God wished mankind to learn a great lesson as to the effects of sin. So He permitted them to take their own course, that they might see that waywardness and sin ultimately result in depravity of mind, body and morals. Had He not provided a recovery, all would have slipped down the broad road to death—not eternal torment; for God never provided torture for anybody. During the Dark Ages people got the idea that God had purposed a devilish thing—that the majority of mankind would spend eternity in torment. But the Bible teaches most positively that "the wages of sin is death"; that "the soul that sinneth it shall die"; that the broad road leads to destruction.—Romans 6:23; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; etc.

The Power and the Wisdom of God are manifested in the works of creation; His Justice has been manifested ever since man's fall. But the Love of God, the Grace of God, was not manifested until our Lord Jesus came; and it is not yet manifested to the world. Only a comparatively small number have any clear perception of the grace of God in Christ.

Gradual Revelation of Truth.

When Jesus came to earth to become the Messiah and to die for mankind, even His chosen Twelve were slow to grasp the real import of His mission. It was not until after Pentecost that they saw that He could not set up His Kingdom to bless the world until life had become the Redeemer by dying for mankind; and that they themselves could not reign with Him until they had suffered and died with Him. They saw that His only one man was sentenced to death—all the others dying in Him—so the death of only one man was necessary as a corresponding price, to purchase the whole world back from death.—1 Corinthians 15:21, 22.

Such is the Story of the operation of God's grace toward man. But this grace of God has as yet appeared only to a choice few—a "little flock." There has been a Grace Fund provided in the death of Christ, sufficient for the sins of all mankind. But God has His own arrangement as to how the merit of Jesus' death is to be applied. Thus far that death has only opened up the "narrow way" for the Church, and provided for their cleansing. (Matthew 7:13, 14.) All the grace of God now manifested is in this "narrow way." Of course, the world are recipients of His unmerited favor in the sense that He causes the sun to shine upon the evil and the good, etc.; He treats the whole world graciously and kindly. But He receives none into His favor except those who have entered the "narrow way."

But the grace of God only begins with the Church. Just as soon as the Church are glorified with their Head, Christ Jesus, the "narrow way" will be out of commission at once; and another way will be opened up—the Highway of Holiness. (Isaiah 35:8-10.) This great Highway will lead up to perfection of human nature; for the blessing to the world will not be a change of nature, as with the Church, but the attainment of perfect human life and an Edenic earth. The redeemed of the earth shall walk upon this great, grand Way, which will lead to everlasting life upon the earthly plane. But only the obedient shall walk up this Highway. The persistent, wicked and wilful shall be destroyed.

DIED FROM SHOCK SUFFERED WHILE VISITING HOSPITAL

Mrs. John H. Dowd Passed Away Early This Morning at the Portsmouth Hospital Where She Had Been Visiting Friend.—Mrs. Grace Paterson Also Dead.

Mrs. John H. Dowd, wife of Postmaster Dowd, died suddenly this morning at the Portsmouth Hospital following a shock suffered in the evening while visiting a friend who was a patient at the institution. Mrs. Dowd passed away at 1:00 o'clock and a few moments later Mrs. Grace Paterson, daughter of A. P. Wendell, a patient at the hospital, also passed away.

Mrs. Dowd was apparently in perfect health when she called at the hospital late in the evening to visit Mrs.

Graves who has been a patient there for some little time. She was preparing to leave for her home on Kent street at about 8:15 when she suffered a paralytic shock from which she never recovered. Dr. Taylor was called but the patient failed to rally to any treatment. The body was removed to her home shortly after 2:00 o'clock. Mr. Dowd suffered a severe shock when notified of the condition of his wife, as no idea had been held that she was in any other condition than perfect health.

POLISH PEOPLE HOLD A DANCING PARTY

The social season in the Polish colony opened at the West End on Saturday night with a dancing party in the hall at the corner of Islington and Cass streets. It was the first entertainment of its kind that has taken place in that section and the hall was crowded to the doors. Five pieces from the navy band band rendered music and the guests came from all parts of the city. They danced from 7:30 until midnight.

PLEASING RECITAL.

The recital held recently at Association hall offered a rare treat for the music lovers who attended. An excellent program was presented and finely executed by all, showing much musical talent and application. The piano selections were beautifully rendered by Miss Squire and Miss Doolittle.
